

Diary of Wit

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN
Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information
Bureau, Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 5.—A book that describes intimately the life and personality of the United States senator, throughout the war and the six or seven years preceding it, cannot fail to be a work of great interest now, and of constantly increasing value as time goes on.

It is a book, unknown to the public and even to many members of the senate, has been written—and is still being written—by Senator Henry of South Dakota, of the upper house of congress. And this senatorial diary which already fills two enormous volumes, is the most intimate and accurate that anyone might imagine who was familiar with the general run of senatorial utterance. This diary is written in a bawling, thumping style, full of color, energy and sentiment, often humorous and always human. It is a book which will probably be read in the future, not only because it contains historical data, but also because, like the countless diaries of Samuel Pepys, it is the picture of a man.

Senator Ashurst is extremely modest about his diary, and refuses flatly to be interviewed on the subject. He is said to have refused an offer of $10,000 for the manuscript, and to have no plans for publishing it. But he has allowed his friends to read the diary, and the contents of it and the facts about its origin and growth are pretty well known to a small circle.

Senator Ashurst spent his boyhood and youth in Arizona, in the pioneer days. He knew what it was to hide in the brush from wild Indians before he wore long trousers, but he didn't know what a railroad train looked like. When the Ashurst family became affluent enough to buy a cook stove, it took six months to get this luxury, and cost more than $200.

Senator Ashurst lives, to a most unusual extent, in the memory of these early days. His diary is full of references to them. And his diary-keeping habit derives from them, for in those days nearly everyone kept a diary. The senator, then a young man, was a member of the party that found the body. When they reached the camp of the missing man, he found that no entry had been made in his diary for three days, the son knew at once that his father must be lost, for he had never before known him to miss making his diary entry.

During the war, the senator wrote about little except the war. His diary becomes a history of the war in Washington, with some good character notes of the men he met, and descriptions of exciting days. But the most interesting parts of the journal are the personal touches, which reveal the man.

For example, Friday, Sept. 13, 1918, the senator celebrates his forty-fourth birthday at a dinner party. Not only is it an unlucky day, as the senator gleefully points out to his guests, but the ill-luck is complete, for the fact that he has 13 letters in his name. When, in addition, it is discovered that there are 13 people at the table, no less than six of those present show their best wishes to the senator.

By this the senator means that most of us are a little nutty. He goes on to say that he would like to be superstitious, but that none of his superstitions would ever work. "In my first campaign for the senate," he records, "I wore an opal, a black opal, and a large number of friends besought me to leave it off. The victory could come to anyone wearing an opal!"

The senator won, opal and all. He adds to this passage a few remarks that should be valuable to any young man entering politics.

"I would not have worn a diamond," says "It might have looked too good and too comfortable for a one of the needy to wear. By the same token a tribute of the people."

WOMEN'S CLUBS PLAN YEAR'S UPLIFT WORK

The monthly meeting of the City Federation of Women's Clubs was held at the Janesville Center yesterday morning. The theme of the present quarters for another year was approved, and the monthly report of the treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Peterson, accepted. Mrs. W. H. Judd of the rooms committee reported that the place had been thoroughly cleaned and renovated and the furniture restained and varnished. Mrs. E. Campbell of the decoration committee reported the purchase of one red chair. A small standing bookcase is needed to house the magazines, and extra tables and chairs are needed for the lunches, she reported.

Individual and club donations to the extent of $85 were reported by Mrs. Judd. A report of the chairman of the dental committee, Mrs. J. G. Koster, outlined the work for the coming year. It is planned to start the inspection of the teeth of the school children as early as possible, and afterward have the dental committee work on defective teeth are taken care of. Associated with her on the committee are Miss Agnes Weber and Mrs. Fred Sheldon.

The committee for the annual rummage sale, the proceeds of which help to maintain the rest room, was announced by the president of the federation, Miss Gertrude Cobb, to be Mrs. Fred Campbell, Mrs. E. B. Matheson, Mrs. J. H. McVicar. They asked the cooperation of all the club presidents and of the group leaders in making the affair a success. They also requested the women to begin looking over their attics and store rooms and getting articles in readiness for the sale.

Special mention was made of the splendid cooperation of the country women last year in bringing in vegetables, chickens, and eggs and fruits which found such a ready sale, and their continued good will for this year's sale was asked.

The committee on probation officer for the present year as announced by Miss Cobb includes Mrs. S. M. Smith, Mrs. T. H. Starkham, and Miss Margaret Youngdahl.

Mine Workers Open Offices for Coming Convention

(By Associated Press.)
Cleveland, O., Sept. 5.—John L. Lewis, acting president of the United Mine Workers of America, and other international officers have established headquarters here, preliminary to the opening of the two weeks' convention, which begins next Tuesday.

Mr. Lewis said the convention would devote its time largely to the consideration of the demand for a substantial increase in wages and the inauguration of a six-hour day for the miners. Two thousand delegates representing 500,000 miners are expected to attend the convention.

Glasgow Trades Unions Have Lively Time Coming

(By Associated Press.)
London, Thursday, Sept. 4.—Among the scores of resolutions that will be submitted before the Glasgow congress of trades unions which will open next Monday, there will be two outstanding subjects which have been topics of liveliest debate at all labor gatherings in recent months. They are the nationalization of industries like coal mines and railways, and the policy of "direct action" or the employment of a national strike as a weapon to enforce political demands.

French Farmers Rise Up Against Food Rules

(By Associated Press.)
Elois, France, Thursday, Sept. 4.—Delegates representing 120,000 farmers in central and western France, in session here, today protested against "arbitrary measures to reduce the cost of living, of which the farmers are the victims," denounced all "measures for fixing prices, real or disguised," and asked that on all committees charged with establishing prices of foodstuffs farmers should have the same representation as consumers.

Lucy Manfredi, a young Italian girl, just arrived in this country as a stowaway, coming from Columbia, Italy.

SENATORIAL DIARY THROWS HUMOROUS LIGHT ON POLITICS

ple should not be fat or funny. His countenance should be "kicked over with the pale cast of thought" and his words should be like red hot iron on the fastening of the body politic. Imagine Wendell Phillips, Abraham Lincoln, Garrison, or Lovejoy, boisterous in manner and interesting private comments on politics by one who is in them. In one passage he has some good advice for presidential candidates, and in another some cogent suggestions on how to hold the presidential job after you have got it.

Comments on Hughes.
Commenting on the defeat of Hughes in 1918, he says that if Hughes had just stayed out of California and kept his mouth shut, he would have been elected.

Hughes in 1918 and Blaine in 1884 were secure while within their own fortifications," he comments. All they had to do was to wait for election day, think little, remain silent, and each would have been elected. Hughes, but little and say nothing is the best advice I could give a presidential candidate.

On the day that Wilson was inaugurated for the first time, he indulges in some presidential reflections. He says that "it failed to hold his job because he allowed things to become dull, and that Roosevelt was a success as a president because he kept things lively."

"Of all defects that hamper a president," he concludes, "to be prosaic is the most deadly." Witness John Adams, Tyler, Fillmore, Buchanan, Hayes, and Harrison.

There certainly seems to be something in the senator's suggestion that prosaic men are seldom re-elected to office, no matter how worthy. Here is a brand new slant on national politics. Whatever else the public gets it must have entertainment.

The diary contains an especially good picture of W. J. Bryan, who crops up again and again in one capacity or another. While the peerless leader was constantly before the senator's eyes, he had nothing to wash them down with; but when the report was finished Bryan was forgiven for lack of liquid refreshment, as he brought us cigars, or in boxes, and each box marked "pipe of peace."

A characteristic entry is that of the day when Arizona was admitted to statehood. He begins by comparing the present day Arizona with that of the pioneer days, showing what progress the state has made; but he soon runs off into a description of the desert. "The desert has the regal and sensuous pomp, the scarlet glory of blooming cactus, the pungent odor of wild sage," he writes, trying to describe the fascination which the desert exerts on the mind. "But the desert is cruel; her heated sands and scorching winds, her blazing and pitiless furnace of sun, her merciless flail of heat, her poisonous reptiles, her scarce and alkaline waters, her bitter dust, her deceptive and her overbearing appearance of topography bring awful thirst, confusion, exhaustion, delirium and death when the canteen leaks, the trail is lost, or the horse plays out."

The senator has in an unusual degree the devotion to the soil that produced him which is characteristic of so many westerners. He writes with a tingling of personality and trenchantly of events, but when he hits the subject of Arizona and the early days he is full of eloquence and sentiment.

This is not a fair account of the senator's diary, for it is too short to include any of the analyses of great questions, his vivid accounts of events, his pictures of social and political life in Washington, and his characteristic thoughtfulness and contemplation. But doubtless the public will have the whole book in due course, and meantime, more power to the senator's elbow!

Why do the gears clash when you drive the car?

By Grant M. Hyde, Associate Professor of Journalism, The University of Wisconsin.

"When mother drives the auto, Dad, why does she make so much noise with the gears? You never do."

"Well, sonny, when she shifts gears, she doesn't give the clutch-shaft time to stop spinning."

"What is the clutch-shaft, Dad?"

"It's this shaft here between the clutch and the gear-box. (See drawing.) It's put in there so that you can disconnect the engine to shift from one speed to another. By pressing the clutch pedal and moving the gear lever you disconnect the clutch-shaft at both ends. Otherwise you couldn't shift gears without smashing something."

"See here. When you push down the clutch pedal, you release the clutch-shaft from the clutch so that

Clutch pedal, Floor of car, Gear box, Clutch, Diagram showing gears in low speed

Clutch released, Diagram showing gears in neutral

The engine is running free. And so, when the clutch is out and the gear lever is in neutral, the clutch-shaft stands still because the rear end is not meshed with any gears. In turning the box, when you move the lever into first speed, or second, or third, you are meshing the rear end of the clutch-shaft with one gear or another. That's what gear-shifting makes. The gears clash because she has not learned, by feeling, how long to hold the lever in neutral to let the disconnected clutch-shaft slow up.

"But, Dad, why do you have to shift gears?"

"Because gasoline engines have little power when they run slowly. In third speed (or high gear), the engine shaft revolves about four times while the rear axle shaft revolves once. If the car is running very slowly or standing still, such a gear ratio would make the motor run so slowly that it would have scarcely any power. And so, for starting and hard pulls, the car has a first speed (or low gear) which enables the engine to make perhaps 15 or 20 revolutions while turning the axle once. Then it has power. Second speed is halfway between the other two."

SALESMANSHIP FOR NEWSBOYS

By J. M. Miller, Director of Boys' and Girls Newspaper Service.

According to the American Magazine, Mose Jacobs of Des Moines is the richest newsboy in America. His success is due to his tactful way of accommodating people. For example, whenever any man of prominence comes to his city, Mose is at the train to hand him the latest copy of his home paper as soon as he gets off.

This original trick has earned wide-spread fame. Last winter at Columbus Circle in New York, there was a newsstand with a heavy curtain to keep out the cold. All the customers ever saw was a hand thrust forth from the darkness to get the pennies. Men have walked in black to avoid buying a paper here. It would pay the dealer well to climb himself in a warm overcoat and a warmer smile, and look the public squarely in the eye. After all, smiles are not very common on the street; that is why the newsboy that has one is so quickly noticed.

SALESMANSHIP FOR NEWSBOYS

It pays a newsboy, just as it pays any other salesman, to be clean and neat. Many a man has walked across the street to buy a paper from a clean, trim, quiet boy, although right by him there was some dirty urchin shouting at the top of his voice the headlines of his finger-marked sheets. These hints are simply little things, but they are salesmanship. They mean money.

This series comes every Friday. Read it and make money on Saturday. Next week: "Profits from a Cellar Factory."

1,500 People Made Use of
Gazette Tent at Fair

It was estimated by James Sheridan, who had charge of the Gazette information and rest tent at the fair grounds during the fair, that close to 1,500 people took advantage of the tent. It was opened the first day of the fair and kept open until last night. Many mothers left their babies at the tent under the care of Mrs. H. M. Fris. Out of town people came to the tent to eat their dinners. The telephones were used a great deal, as was the free parcel checking service.

SCHOOL CHILDREN
WIN FAIR PRIZES
WITH HANDIWORK

(By MRS. ABRIE HELMS.)
Groups of wide-eyed children gazed fondly upon their handiwork, and proud parents bringing the neighbors to see the garden stuff which Johnnie raised, or the patchwork quilt which Jennie's school made, are features of the educational department of the fair. Among the first grade children, a pretty log cabin made by the Jefferson school won first prize.

Deloss Freeman won second in the class of construction problems. In the freehand drawing, the Washington school won first, and the Webster school, second. In the freehand cutting the Washington won first, and Frederick Harkner, second.

In the second grade construction work, the Jackson school took first and Leslie Bork, second prizes. In the freehand drawing the Adams building took first, and the Douglas second. In the freehand cutting the Jefferson took first, and the Adams second.

In grade five, Leon DeLambert had problem was most successfully worked out by the Washington school. The Washington school took first in the chart work, the training school, and the Jefferson school had the prizes. In grade four, the Jefferson took both prizes in construction work, and the Grant and Adams took the prizes for chart work.

In grade five, Leon DeLambert had constructed a unique airplane which took first prize in construction work. The second prize was won by Bernice Randerick. In grade six the Garfield school won the first prize in construction work, and the Douglas second. For a booklet, Gene Kratz received first, and Gertrude Heller, second. For a poster, the Garfield and the Grant received prizes, and the Jefferson and Douglas seven the Jefferson school got first prize for construction and the Adams took prize on a booklet. Amelia Nimmer and the Washington school took the prizes for posters and Wilhelmina Cook for best design.

Harold Bauman Wins Prize.
In grade eight, Harold Bauman took first in the construction and Donald Black and the Washington school, second prizes. In the booklet, Harold Bauman and Ruth Grider took prizes. In maps, Fola Hilton took first. In charts, the Adams and Lincoln. The prizes for designs went to Margaret Spoon, Elizabeth Capelle and Wilhelmina Cook. Miss May Clark and Miss Margaret Joyce were in charge of this department.

In the rope work for high school pupils the first prize was won by Lyle Boyes, who had a neat display mounted on cards. A close second was given by Malcolm Paul. Lyle Boyes also had some drawing in the manual training department where he took seven first prizes. Lawrence Nichols having some creditable work with three firsts. A unique showing by Lyle Boyes was the plan of a house now in course of construction, and drawn with good architectural ability.

Girls Exhibit Sewing.
In the hand sewing of the high school there were some creditable things shown. Rosamund Cook has a gingham dress and a set of underwear, showing good workmanship. Fola Hilton, a freshman in the high school has several pieces.

Some of the boys in the high school have made signs and banners, one of these, Ervin Schultz doing creditable work. A good many of the promising farmers and outgrowers of the city have brought some of their garden stuff to the fair. Here is Donald Ashton, 10 years old, with three first prizes and three seconds to his credit. He did not have many kinds of things growing in his garden but they were good ones, what he did have. Then Malcolm Haviland, 12 years old, had four first prizes and four seconds.

Little Sanford Atwood has some tiny yellow tomatoes, which he exhibits from his garden patch, and his sister, Dorothy, has first prize for a bouquet of garden flowers.

A display of 22 kinds of garden vegetables was made by Lyle Boyes who took first prize for best display. Miss Fola Hilton had a nicely arranged collection of weed seeds completely labeled.

The display of cookery by the high school girls while smaller than usual, is appealing and of good variety. The judging had not been completed and results were not obtainable. Sample menus for two days meals for a family at a cost of 45 cents a day for each person brought out some interesting data, while plans for a kitchen showing arrangements of various articles of furnishings were of practical value.

There are about eight country schools from which Mr. Antisdel has no report that a teacher has been hired. In a few of these schools they have had applications but have not decided upon a teacher.

Owing to the delay of supplies, Mr. Antisdel has been unable to send out the envelopes to the teachers. Most of the blanks have now been received. They will be sent out at once. The usual blanks of attendance, report cards for teachers, and perfect attendance slips are included in the supplies.

Fair exhibits which were entered by the various rural schools are being returned by the superintendent and his assistants.

ECONOMIC CONFUSION.

The economic and psychological confusion now confronting the world is analyzed by Henry C. Jones of the New York banking house as follows: "Owing to the multiplicity of conflicting forces it is almost impossible to satisfactorily analyze the present situation. It is quite plain that our difficulties are both social and economic; that many are directly due to the war, and that many others antedate the war. Social unrest has been growing for over a generation, and threatened a crisis just before Germany precipitated the great conflict. The desire of the working classes for better wages and better living conditions was the mainspring of that crisis, and it was further stimulated by the determination to curb the monopolistic tendencies of the times. In other words the object of the present crisis was a more equitable distribution of wealth; and the war did not stop this movement, but, on the contrary, distinctly intensified it. The war moreover, immeasurably worsened the situation by an unprecedented destruction of life and property, which left a startling scarcity of both labor and commodities. The present work of reconstruction is therefore handicapped at the start by confusing combinations of psychological and economic disorders, for which there is no possible cure except through a tedious course of industry, economy and forbearance. All selfishness in the form of profiteering, or of extravagance will simply delay reconstruction and aggravate a bad situation."

"President Wilson gave the railroad men some sound advice, which they seemed reluctant to accept. He told them plainly that higher wages and shorter hours would inevitably raise and not lower the cost of living. He showed them it was more important to raise the purchasing power of wages by increasing the product than to make fruitless efforts to effect higher costs by higher wages. It would seem that while radical labor refuses to learn these homely truths except by hard experience, conservative and non-unionized labor is more or less inclined to accept the president's advice. One thing is certain, labor is gradually but surely losing former public support by its present extremes; and radicals, bent upon a policy of rule or ruin are surely riding for a fall."

"At this writing, the outlook happens to be more assuring, and labor leaders are evidently moving cautiously. Fully aware that the public is weary of strikes, apparently a more conservative policy is in prospect, especially since the troops, who through aggressive on the side of labor, is not only opposed to the socialist element, but is also too shrewd to go so far in his demands as to invite failure. Out of the present crisis better and more satisfactory methods of settling labor disputes should arise. There is no reason why such questions should not be subjected to negotiation, just the same as any other business transaction. Discussion, arbitration or appeal to the courts, should take the place of such barbarous methods as intimidation, strikes, lockouts and force. Profit-sharing, representation in management and other panaceas have their advantages and disadvantages; but no peace on either side is possible until both parties are prepared to meet on the basis of the square deal and mutual consideration, or live and let live."

RIGHT OF REVOLUTION LOST.

Opponents of the league covenant contend that under the language of Article 11 the council will assume jurisdiction over internal rebellions and revolutions, as it does in Article 11 over "external aggressions." Mr. Taft sees no soundness in that argument. If that construction is admitted, he says, "it is very strange that the fundamental right of each member of the league is to bring to the attention of the assembly or the council under Article 11 only those circumstances which disturb international relations and the peace and the good understanding between nations."

"The exact language of Article 11 gives a member nation the right to bring before the assembly or council 'any circumstances whatever affecting international relations which threaten to disturb either the peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends.' It appears to be clear from that sentence that a circumstance does affect international relations when it is so declared by any member, and the league must forthwith assume jurisdiction. In other words a member state may insist that a revolution in an adjoining country affects its own welfare, which doubtless would be the truth. Under the terms of the covenant the league is bound to take action, and the right of subject peoples to revolt is therefore subject entirely to the consent of the new super-government."

BOLENEVISM.

What is this bolshevism, that is spreading from Russia to Hungary and some other lands, and even venturing on our shores? It is the newest form of imperialism, successor of Alexander, Caesar, and the Kaiser in ambition for domination of the world. This time it is not one man that is to rule the world, but one class. The proletarian are to monopolize political control in each land, and jointly in all lands, by sheer brute strength as the majority, or the masses. It is the very opposite of democracy, which is the government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people. Bolshevism is government of all the people by and for the most ignorant class of the people. Voters have no right to resort to violence, least of all the workmen, who have a clear ma-majority of the votes and so are bound to find redress of grievances by the orderly processes of politics.

A Chinese-American silk company has been organized with a capital of $1,000,000, headquarters to be in Seattle, Wash., for the purpose of importing Chinese silk piece goods from Canton and the island of Honan, adjacent. And this firm will pay the tariff duties of the democratic tariff law on these imports just as long as the democratic party controls the administration.

Reports from Kentucky are that the recent election of a republican to congress from a district heretofore consistently democratic is only a starter for a series of such events. That a majority of the congressional delegation from Kentucky will be republican in the next congress is predicted. And dissatisfaction with the national democratic administration is given as a reason.

President Wilson is entitled to all the consolation he can get out of the recollection that it was his main Hoover who gave the first official boost to the high cost of living. It was Hoover who asked the dining car stewards to cut down the quantity of food served, without asking them to cut the price at the same time.

"All that is arbitrary and coercive," declared the president, is to be discarded. Those who seek to employ it only prepare their own destruction. How true, and yet the reader may find a different application for the warning than that in the president's mind when he typed the words.

Q. What constitutes eligibility to the Dignitaries of the American Revolution? L. B.

A. Members of the D. A. R. must show an ancestor who fought in the Revolutionary war, or who was a member of the continental congress, or the congress of any one of the colonies, or who was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, or who was an official who actually aided in the establishment of independence by giving service during the war and who, in any case, was consistently loyal to the cause of independence.

Q. What was the amount of Liberty bonds actually sold in each of the issues? V. T.

A. The amount of bonds for which subscriptions were accepted for the five issues was as follows: First issue, $2,000,000,000; second issue, $3,000,000,000; third issue, $3,000,000,000; fourth issue, $6,000,000,000; fifth issue, $4,000,000,000.

Q. What is the meaning of the word "Oregon"? E. P.

Q. Who is General Sibert? L. F. I.

A. Major General William J. Sibert is a veteran engineer officer. He is the man who built the locks in the Ohio river, who built the Gatun dam at Panama. He was made a major general by congress for the latter accomplishment. He went with General Pershing to France in command of the first troops to go over. He returned to the United States and organized the chemical warfare service of which he is still the head.

Q. What does "give a Roland for an Oliver" mean? N. W.

A. Roland and Oliver were two of Charlemagne's 12 peers, famed for their skill with arms. They finally got each other and fought for five days. They were so equally matched, however, that no decision was reached. Therefore to give a Roland for an Oliver is to give a blow for a blow.

MUSTANG HUNTERS.
Along in the eighteen-seventies the region of western Kansas and eastern New Mexico was the range of great herds of wild horses, which are called "mustangs." There are still some old-timers living who remember the days when hunting these wild horses was a very remunerative business.

A good deal has been written about "cursing" mustangs, which consisted of shooting the horse in such a way that he fell stunned, but not seriously injured. As a matter of fact, few horses were caught that way, and three were killed for every one that was taken unhurt.

The true professional mustang hunter had a few fast horses which he kept and trained for the purpose. When he went hunting he took these along, and also a herd of several hundred burros, or Mexican donkeys. When a herd of wild horses was sighted the hunters charged down on them.

FROM CHERRY-BLOSSOM LAND
The Japanese Give Good Example

It is a proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depend on womanly health.

What is it that makes our American women often pale, sallow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old at forty-five when they should be in their prime?

Women suffer in girlhood from back-ache, spine-ache and headaches, followed by irregularities and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

After long experience in the treatment of women's diseases, Dr. Pierce evolved a vegetable tonic and corrective which he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is a purely vegetable preparation, without a particle of alcohol contained in it.

When a woman complains of backache, dizziness or pain—when everything looks black before her eyes—a dragging feeling, or bearing-down, with nervousness, she should turn to this "temperance" herbal tonic. It can be obtained in almost every drug store in the land and the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper. Put up in tablets or liquid.

Dr. Pierce, of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., will send a trial size of the tablets for ten cents.

and roped and hog-tied as many as they could catch. Each of the wild horses was then tied, neck to neck, with one of the burros. Although the burro was a good deal the smaller animal he always had the stronger will, and would drag the mustang home. Later these mustangs were sold in the Mexican settlements along the Rio Grande for $40 or $50 apiece. Some men accumulated considerable fortunes in this business.

REGRET.

I wonder if he knew that I The friend that was so soon to die— The while I mingled with the throng: Now in his room the shades are drawn. His brave voice is forever dumb. And from his eyes the light has gone— He cannot see me when I come.

His lifeless fingers cannot hold The letter I had planned to write; Out of his body, now so cold. He shall not know that I am there, Nor feel my fingers on his cheek, He cannot guess how much I care, He cannot hear me when I speak.

How trivial now appear the things That kept me from him yesterday! Had I but heard Death's rustling wings, I should have put them all away. I should have spurned the lure of gain, Beside his bed to watch and wait, To comfort him and soothe his pain, Now I must go tonight—too late!

COUNCIL WRONG IN REDUCING LICENSE FEE, BLAINE RULES

Janesville saloons are operating without licenses, according to a decision handed down by Attorney General John C. Blaine at Madison yesterday.

Mr. Blaine announced that owing to the action of the city council in reducing the license fee from $500 to $375 per annum the licenses were void.

"The city council of Janesville had no authority to reduce the license fee for the saloons, and by doing so they made the licenses void and the saloons owners subject to prosecution for operating without licenses," Attorney General Blaine said.

Mr. Blaine said it was not a matter for his department to handle if the saloons were to be prosecuted.

The city council is entirely up to the district attorney and he will have to prosecute and will be upheld if the cases are started," Mr. Blaine said.

Mayor T. E. Welsh said that before the licenses were granted by the city council advice was received from several Janesville attorneys and they all contended that the city council was within its rights to reduce the license fee.

"Janesville is operating under a special charter, and the charter gives the city council the right to reduce the license fee," Mayor Welsh said.

District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie returned from Superior this morning and announced that the city council had been informed of the action taken by Attorney General Blaine.

"I will call Mr. Blaine today and ascertain what steps are to be taken," he said.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH MEMBERS TO VOTE ON UNION OF PARISHES

Consolidation of the two local Episcopal parishes, Trinity and Christ churches, will be voted on by the members of both bodies at a special meeting to be held at Trinity church, Monday evening, the call for which was issued by Rev. Henry Wilmann of Trinity church, and Robert M. Bostwick, senior warden and treasurer of Christ church.

The legislature's permission to the two churches has been secured. The call was sent out today, followed by a joint meeting of the vestries of Trinity church and Christ church, held last winter. It was the opinion of the vestries that a consolidation of the two churches would be for the best interests of the church in this city. It was resolved that we ask the legislature to pass such laws as would enable us to legalize such consolidation in order to protect the property interests involved, both present and future.

Law Has Been Passed.
The necessary law has now been passed and at a meeting of the vestries, August 24, it was resolved to call a special meeting of the church members with the canons of the church. You will therefore find posted, on the doors of both Christ church and Trinity church, notice to take place at Trinity church, on the evening of Sept. 8, at 7:30 o'clock. In accordance with the church law, an evening service will be held at the meeting. Each parish will then separate for the purpose of hearing the treasurer's report and for voting on the question of consolidation.

A majority vote in favor of the consolidation and reporting such action to each other, then each meeting will proceed to elect three persons to be known as joint trustees, who will have the necessary further action as provided by the law in the matter. They shall determine the name by which the consolidated society shall be known, they shall file with the register of deeds (1) a certificate of consolidation; (2) a certified copy of the resolution passed at the meeting favoring the consolidation; and (3) a list of the members of the consolidated society for the purpose of electing wardens and vestrymen, adopting by-laws and any other business determined as necessary.

Each Member Has Vote.
"Should a majority in either parish vote against the consolidation, the matter will be dropped, and no further action can be taken. Each adult (male or female) member of the parish has one vote at the meeting."

ELECTION CANVASS DELAYED BY ERROR

A gross error on the part of the election board of the town of Turtle in making returns to the county clerk, resulted in a delay in the official canvass of the soldiers' home election.

All returns of that township were sent in a sealed bag which, by law, could not be opened by the canvassing board. So it was found necessary to order one of the township election inspectors to come to the court house to do the deed.

The official vote as compiled by the board at 3 o'clock this afternoon was: "Yes" and "No" 3,916.

JANESVILLE FAIR OFFICIALS PLEASED WITH ATTENDANCE

Janesville's fair this year was a success, according to the fair officials, although larger crowds have been in attendance in previous years.

"I do not think the reason why Janesville should not have a fair next year," Harry O. Nowlan said when asked if the fair was to be continued.

Thursday a large crowd was on hand to view the livestock parade and the races. The parade started at 1:30 o'clock and required just 25 minutes to pass before the grand stand.

All prize winners were in the march and stockmen from all parts of the middle west were unanimous in their opinion that the livestock department was as good as could be found at any fair in the country.

The fair have been rife about the city for several days that the fair grounds, but the tales are being strenuously denied by the men in charge of the fair.

Harry O. Nowlan said that the crowd Wednesday, Janesville Day, was one of the largest crowds in the history of the fair. Only one other time has the crowd been larger, and that was Janesville day in 1916.

The list of prize winners will be printed in Saturday's Gazette.

THE WISHING PLANE

When the children, Captain Brave and Ladydear arrived at the chalet of the English tourist, Sir Donald Sprigg, next day, the children found to their delight that Angelo, the Italian for whom they had formed a great liking the previous day, was there and had with him one of his great cars. Sir Sprigg explained to the little folks that he, Senator Angelo, and the other men had been friends for many years and that for the last few years they had come to the village in the summer to spend a few weeks' vacation.

bought the chalet so that we would always have a home ready for us," he said. "Senator Angelo brought one of his big cars along to take us around the country whenever we aren't climbing the mountains."

Sir Sprigg proved to be an interesting man too. When the whole party was seated under a big shade tree and Sir Sprigg had brought cigars and cigarettes for the men folks and delicious candy for Ladydear and Jack and Jane, the men began to talk of the countries they had visited either on pleasure or because their work called them. And the children listened breathlessly to some of the thrilling adventures they told.

Sir Sprigg himself had been an officer in the British army in South Africa. He told of fierce battles he and his troops had had with the African natives, battles that meant life or death to the little force of English soldiers.

"We had hardly enough soldiers to keep order in the villages and through the country," said Sir Sprigg. "But occasionally the native tribes would secretly plan a general attack on us in the hopes of either killing all of us or making us prisoners. This would give them a chance to run things themselves, break open the storehouses, steal all the arms and ammunition in our barracks and then carry off our women folks and children."

"Some of the tribes obtained guns and bullets and even cannon from England's enemies, who hoped the black men would kill us. The other native warriors fought with long spears. These spears had sharp iron points and many of them were covered with some kind of poison. These poisoned spears would mean death to anyone they hit even if the wound they made wasn't serious enough to kill you."

"When the tribes attacked us they would come in the dead of night, at a time when there was no moon to help us."

The first thing our guards would hear would be an unearthly yell and then before we could get our men formed into some kind of order the natives would rush at us. We had to fight them any way we could until we could get our men into companies and get our machine guns going. The machine guns, you folks probably know, fire a regular stream of bullets and you can just sweep the ground with them. It's the kind of a gun of which the natives are afraid. One of the bravest men we ever had chased a whole army of natives away one night with one machine gun, but was killed doing it."

"The children weren't the only ones who said, 'Tell us about the man.' So Sir Sprigg told the story. And you'll hear it."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Last fall I met a young fellow from another town. When I first saw him I didn't care much for him. The second time I saw him I liked him very much, and soon afterward we went together. After going together for quite a while we quarreled and for a long time I did not see or hear from him.

About three weeks ago, when I had quite forgotten him, I saw him. My love came back to me. We soon became fast friends and I went with him for about two weeks. Now we have quarreled again.

I am deeply in love with him and I realize I can't sleep or do anything else. I am trying to forget him, but it seems useless. He tries to make me jealous, but I don't want to. Now he hardly looks at me.

I am worried sick because I don't know what to do. Sometimes I wish I were dead or that I never saw him. It is the only fellow I have ever loved.

What shall I do, please to forget him or what?

You have no choice since he acts the way he does. You will have to learn to forget him. You like to think about him and suffer, but before you can really forget you will have to use will power. To do this you must think of him as a person who is not worth your love. If you earnestly try, you can make yourself happy again. There are a lot more fine young men.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 13 years old and am an orphan. I cannot get work anywhere except housework and that does not pay over $4.50 or $5 a week, which does not keep me clothed well. I have seen in the papers for movie star writers and have often thought of trying my luck. Do you think it would be all right?

Can a girl be movie star and be decent? There is no safe place for a little girl of your age except in a home. Stick to housework for a few years longer, and in that time see how much longer you can do to improve yourself. Clothes are not everything, and if you read and study you will prepare yourself for a good position somewhere when you are old enough to take it. It is the exception when a girl of your age has more than $4.50 or $5 a week spent on her clothes. I think you should be willing to spend even less and save so that when you are older you can take a course at a business school.

It would pay to try to write for the movies. Practice makes perfect and in time when you are more experienced, you will probably get something accepted. Of course it is not easy to get scenarios accepted, but if you are willing to work hard enough at it there is no reason why you should not reach your goal.

Yes, a girl can be a movie star and be decent. The irregular hours, however, does not make it easy for her to be decent.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl of 14. I have been keeping company with a boy and my senior, and his boy friend to go out to a swimming pool. Would it be proper to go? (2) Do I do wrong in going boat riding Sunday with a boy I have never met before?

(1) No, it would not be proper to go unless the mother of one of you goes along.

(2) You should not have gone boat riding with him unless formally introduced by some friend whose judgment you respect. A girl compromises her reputation by making friends with strangers without introduction.

BLACK SATIN GOWN FOR EVENING WEAR

By ELOISE.

There are going to be many more evening gowns in evidence this year than there have been for a few years past and there are going to be more formal functions where they may be worn. Here is a gown which is stunning in its simplicity. The skirt is black satin exquisitely hung in pleats with a panel of jet in the front and a jet ornament, holding in the pleats at the hem. The sleeveless bodice is made of two bands of the jet over silver cloth. This makes a stunning dinner gown or dance frock.

apt to see it under the circumstances. "Oh, yes," she said, "we are going there tomorrow or the weekend." Apparently I did not look as surprised as I felt, for she did not seem to feel that this statement required any explanation, but went on to some other subject.

Just think, she went about saying that the man had cheated them and that the woman was in the habit of lying! And yet she considered them sufficiently close friends to visit! Of course we must talk about people.

Of course, it is inevitable that people should talk about each other. We shouldn't there for the week-end. And of course it is inevitable that one says even of one's friends and not be unloyal praise. But there is a difference between minor criticisms, tempered by words of appreciation and kindly feeling and the malicious bitter criticism such as the neighborhood group of whom I spoke dealt out to the absent one, or accusations of downright wrong doing such as this woman made in regard to her host and hostess-to-be.

Rosa Woodfolk, Philadelphia, Pa., is probably the most accomplished colored woman in domestic science in the United States. She is six feet tall, a fine dressmaker and milliner, makes boys' suits and clothes, and recently while visiting her mother in Virginia, took with her rolls of wall paper and papered the house throughout during her visit and painted it inside and out as well. She also excels in cooking.

But they were all right for a host and hostess. "Isn't that too bad?" I said, "I always liked Jack and Mildred in the days they had a nice new house, by the way—I don't suppose you're nowadays."

But they were all right for a host and hostess. "Isn't that too bad?" I said, "I always liked Jack and Mildred in the days they had a nice new house, by the way—I don't suppose you're nowadays."

A CHANCE TO LIVE

ANNIE STORMS THE CITADEL.
The procession was of goodly size, quieter now and resolute under the leadership of the leader. At first Annie was caught in the suction and carried along. Later as the throng swung into broad Delancey street she could have escaped and caught her car for home. But something urged her to continue and see what happened. She had been thinking constantly of the problems of the poor and of her own in particular since she and Bernie, even more keenly interested than she, brought home leaflets one night, handed out by another street speaker, and together they parted over them. From these Annie learned that Socialism was the name of the doctrine propounded by the speakers and by the leaflets.

Fragments from one of the handbills floated through her mind as she allowed herself to be magnetized into the throng of rushing women. "You must own the tools of industry before bread will be secured for you." "You live under a system of society where the few revel in luxury and the many labor in the sweat of their brows for daily existence. None of it was for leisure to Annie, yet she connected it somehow with the demonstration of which she was now a part.

A woman grasped her arm and drew her vigorously into line with the throng of housewives. "Come on—come with us," she cried. "Help us get our rights—food for our starving children!" The queer army came over the Bowery and turned southward, amid the stares and jeers of puzzled onlookers. At Chatham square it veered off into Park row, rounding the Municipal building and crossing to city hall. A few policemen looked doubt-fully at the strange procession, but did not stop it. "Don't hesitate. March on and follow me!" ordered the leader as with her molli band she entered the little park where stand the mayors' cars. Hundreds of pedestrians paused to gaze. Half a dozen policemen, hesitating no longer, approached the women. "Have you business here?" asked one, touching the leader's elbow as she marched her cohorts up the broad steps of the city hall.

"We have," she answered firmly. "We wish to see the mayor."

"The women crowded up into the classic pillared portico, more determined than ever, having got thus far. The policemen now saw that they had announced a visitation to deal with."

"You can't go in here like this, in a gang, what's the matter with you?" the spokesman began. "Have you got an appointment with the mayor?" "That's my business," said the woman more emphatically than diplomatically. "Come, friends," she called to the women behind her, and again started to enter the building. The officer became businesslike at once. "Your friends," he said, with a threatening air, "of this club 'can stick there'." At this signal the other policemen proceeded to force the women backward. They resisted and there was a lively moment or two. Some one telephoned for the "reserves" and in five minutes enough of New York's bluecoated guardians were clanging up in patrol wagons on the run, with drawn sticks to disperse an armed mob of rioters. (To be continued.)

SIDE TALKS

DOESN'T IT
There is a great sadness to me in the way people who are, or pretend to be friends, talk about each other. Take a half dozen couples who live in the neighborhood together and go about together, dine at each other's houses and perhaps belong to some neighborhood club, and let any two of those couples get together and the way they will talk about the other four is a caution. Especially—and this I must admit, champion of my sex though I am—the women folks. The Things She Said About Those People!

One day last winter I went to lunch with an old friend of mine who had come to town to pay a round of visits. We talked of all our old friends and acquaintances and she had a great deal to say about a certain couple with whom she and her husband used to be very intimate. It seems that both she and her husband felt that the man had greatly changed and wasn't at all the man he used to be. They considered that he had become very sharp in a business way and they felt very bitter against him for a deal in which they had been involved and in which they felt he had acted more like a crook than a friend. As for the wife, well, she also had changed. You couldn't depend on a word she said nowadays.

But they were all right for a host and hostess. "Isn't that too bad?" I said, "I always liked Jack and Mildred in the days they had a nice new house, by the way—I don't suppose you're nowadays."

The Magnificent Ambersons

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright by Doubleday, Page &amp; Co.

Two weeks after Isabel's death, Eugene was in New York on urgent business and found that the delayed arrival of a steamer gave him a day with nothing to do. His room at the hotel had become intolerable; outdoors was intolerable; everything was intolerable. It seemed to him that he must see Isabel once more, hear her voice once more; that he must find some way to her, or lose his mind. Under this pressure he had gone, with complete scepticism, to a "trance-medium" of whom he had heard wild accounts from the wife of a business acquaintance.

The experience had been grotesque, and he came away with an encouraging message from his father, who had failed to identify himself satisfactorily, but declared that everything was "on a higher plane" in his present state of being, and that all life was "continuous and progressive." Mrs. Horner spoke of herself as a "psychic"; but otherwise she seemed oddly unpretentious and matter-of-fact; and Eugene had no doubt at all of her sincerity. He went to Mrs. Horner's after his directors' meeting today. He used the telephone booth in the directors' room to make the au-pointment; and he laughed feebly at himself, and wondered what the group of men in that mahogany apartment would think if they knew what he was doing. Mrs. Horner had changed her address, but he found the new one, and somehow purporting to be a niece of hers talked to him and made an appointment for a "sitting" at five o'clock.

Mrs. Horner appeared in the doorway, a wan and unenterprising looking woman in brown, with thin hair artificially waved—but not recently—and parted in the middle over a bluish forehead. Her eyes were small and seemed weak, but she recognized the visitor.

"Oh, you been here before," she said, in a thin voice, not unkindly. "I recollect you. Quite a time ago, wa'n't it?"

"Yes, quite a long time."

"I recollect because I recollect you was disappointed. Anyway, you was kind of cross." She laughed faintly.

"I'm sorry if I seemed so," Eugene said. "Shall we—"

"All right," she assented, dropped into the leather chair, with her back to the shaded window. "You better set down, too, I reckon. I hope you'll get something this time so you won't feel cross, but I dunno. I can't never tell what they'll do. Well—"

She sighed, closed her eyes, and was silent, while Eugene, seated in the stiff chair across the table from her, watched her profile, thought himself

THAT'S DIFFERENT

By Probasco

seemed to ramble. "Name hard to get—always very hard for Lopa. Name. She wants to tell me her name to tell you. She wants you to understand names are hard to make. She says you must think of something that makes a sound." Here the voice seemed to put a question to an invisible presence and to receive an answer. "A little sound or a big sound? She says it might be a little sound or a big sound. She says a ring—oh, Lopa knows! She means a bell! That's it, a bell."

Eugene looked grave. "Does she mean her name is Belle?"

"Not quite. Her name is longer."

"Perhaps," he suggested, "she means that she was a belle."

"No. She says she thinks you know what she means. She says you must think of a color. What color?" Again Lopa addressed the unknown, but this time seemed to wait for an answer.

"Perhaps she means the color of her eyes?" said Eugene.

"No. She says her color is light—it's a light color and you can see through it."

"Amber?" he said, and was startled, for Mrs. Horner, with her eyes still closed, clapped her hands, and the voice cried out in delight:

"Yes! She says you know who she is from amber. Amber! Amber! That's it! She says you understand what her name is from a bell and from amber. She is laughing and waving a lace handkerchief at me because she is pleased. She says I have made you know who it is."

This was the strangest moment of Eugene's life, because, while it lasted, he believed that Isabel Amberson, who was dead, had found means to speak to him. Though within ten minutes he doubted it, he believed it then.

His elbows pressed hard upon the table, and his head between his hands, he leaned forward, staring at the commonplace figure in the easy chair. "What does she wish to say to me?"

"She is happy because you know her. No—she is troubled. Oh—a great trouble! Something she wants to tell you. She wants so much to tell you. She wants Lopa to tell you. This is a great trouble. She says—oh, yes, she wants you to be—to be kind! That's what she says. That's it. To be kind."

"Does she—"

"She wants you to be kind," said the voice. "She nods when I tell you this. Yes; it must be right. She is a very fine lady. Very pretty. She is so anxious for you to understand. She hopes and hopes you will. Someone else wants to speak to you. This is a man. He says—"

"Sergt. Salvage to Zoo? Nothing Doing," Say Men

St. Louis, Mo.—Give "Sergeant Salvage" to the Forest park zoo? Nothing doing, says Lieutenant Robert I. Avery of the fifth regiment of marines. It would be like giving away the battle flag or changing the name of Arkansas.

Just so long as there is an Eighth Machine Gun company of the Fifth or a man of the unit surviving "Sergeant Salvage" will stay with the marines.

"Sergeant Salvage" is a tiny French donkey—the mascot of the Eighth Machine Gun company, and it has been suggested that because of the fact that many St. Louis boys were in the outfit, the donkey be given to the local zoo.

Cocoon Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisided cocoon oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Multisided cocoon oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

FAST CARD TURNS OUT TO BE FARCE

What promised to be one of the most thrilling races on the program of the Janesville fair turned into a regular comedy drama yesterday afternoon when six horses out of the eight starters in the 2:13 pace were drawn. The first heat started with eight of the fastest horses on the grounds battling for the premier honors, and the 1,500 spectators settled back to enjoy a real horse race.

At the end of the fourth heat there were only two horses left to compete. The Alm, driven by Charles Dean, Jr., and General Baldwin, handed by George Spencer. The Alm was re-gained victor and second money was awarded to Mr. Spencer, driving General Baldwin.

In the first heat of the race The Alm was the first under the wire, Belle Chaffin second and Hal Patch third.

In the second heat Hal Patch came to the front and topped the heat, with Belle Chaffin second and The Alm third. The third heat was started the judges announced that an epidemic of lameness had developed and Liberty Bell, Sheriff Peter, Ellis Strathmore and Win Dillon were withdrawn.

That was not so bad, as it left the real fast horses in the race. Belle Chaffin was the choice of the horsemen to win the money. In the third heat the favorite came through and grabbed first honors. General Baldwin stopped up and secured second place and Hal Patch third.

Between the third and fourth heats the lameness epidemic spread like wildfire and the judges again pronounced that Belle Chaffin with two seconds and a first was drawn. Then the crowd began to grumble and hundreds left the grand stand and started home.

Masterful driving returned General Baldwin winner in the fourth heat with The Alm second and Hal Patch third. Even with three horses left many of the onlookers were confident of a real race and while discussing the merits of the three horses, the judges again announced that lameness had struck Hal Patch and as a result two horses were left to compete.

In the fifth heat The Alm romped home winner by a scant half foot.

The sixth and deciding heat was not even exciting to the men who had bet their shiekels and General Baldwin was left far in the rear, allowing The Alm to top the race by several lengths.

In the 2:14 trot, Armata, driven by R. Hutchinson, had an easy time winning three straight heats. The winner easily outclassed the other three entries and at no time during any of the heats was the horse forced to extend its efforts.

The summary:

Ray Fisher May Get Chance To Win Fame in Big Series

By N. E. BROWN

Is the gentleman who tends the door at the hall of fame about to open the portals for Ray Fisher? Maybe so.

At least Fisher, one of the fortunate members of the American league, hopes to get the high sign.

Fisher broke into the big leagues back in 1910 as a member of the Yankees under George Stallings. Ray Pennington and if they do break into the grand grind Fisher may be of value to Moran in one of two ways or both.

He has pitched to practically all of the men who stand a chance of breaking into the series from the American league and knows their peculiarities and weaknesses. If he does not get into the game he will be able to slip the hurriers who do some pointers.

Then there is the other way. He may break into the game, Moran figuring that he might be able to hit the opposition because of his knowledge of them, although Miller Huggins and other American league managers figured he was through.

I think there is no one who would begrudge Fisher the glory that would be his if he did get the big chance and made good.

Maybe it is written in the stars that he will be one of the heroes of the fall classic.

Ray Fisher.

had the earmarks of a great hurler and for short intervals looked like one, but for some reason or other couldn't stand the pace.

The fact that the Yankees never got far out of the rut might have had something to do with Fisher's inability to break through the crust. He had one big year, however, when he won eighteen and lost eleven games for the mediocre Gotham crew.

Last spring he was related to the Cincinnati club as part of the Schneider deal. He started off like a whirlwind for Moran, but lately has not been used very frequently. He is not done, though, by any means. Moran has been using Salles, Eller, Lucie, Ring and Reuther and they have been going good without help from Ray.

It looks more and more as though nothing can keep the Reds away from

Griffith On The War Path In Mays Case

Clarke Griffith, of the Washington Senators, is on the war path. He brands Cole, Ruppert and Huston, of the New York Yankees, as the champion bluffers of North America, and says before another baseball season has dawned in this country, both of them will be made to see the folly of their rash acts in the Mays case.

Griffith lines up solidly with Ban Johnson. He does not even hesitate to oppose Charles Comiskey, because he says he has proof that every club in the Johnson circuit was advised to "lay-off" Carl Mays, and that New York and Boston got their heads together just for the purpose of getting Johnson "in bad" with the public.

Griffith cites the fact that under the rules, no club in the American league has a right to vote while that club is under a suspension of any kind. In spite of this, he says Boston and New York voted with Comiskey to annul Johnson's suspension of Hurley Mays rendering the vote absolutely worthless.

That Griffiths has taken a stand with Johnson in the Mays matter is of the greatest importance to baseball men. The Washington leader has not always been so friendly to Big Ban, and only last winter was charged with being one of the promoters behind the movement to oust Johnson after the league head made his famous utterance in favor of applying for exemption of all ball players who were eligible for the United States army draft.

"When—races, ruppert and Comiskey got together to take that vote, Comiskey was the only one with a right to vote," said Griffith, "and he hasn't a chance in the world to think we are going to stand for one man doing all the voting in this circuit."

Griffith's tone and speeches would indicate he intends to have something to say about the Mays deal and the vote to annul Johnson's suspension, when the moguls gather. "The Mays deal is one of the jokes of the season," said Griffith, "and it certainly cannot stand on its merits." Griffiths declares there was no rupture in his friendship for Comiskey, but that he has not going to sacrifice his right to an opinion in the Mays case.

THE now-a-day world judges tires from a business standpoint.

For after all, buying tires is merely buying miles at so much a mile.

That's exactly the basis on which we sell 'Royal Cords'.

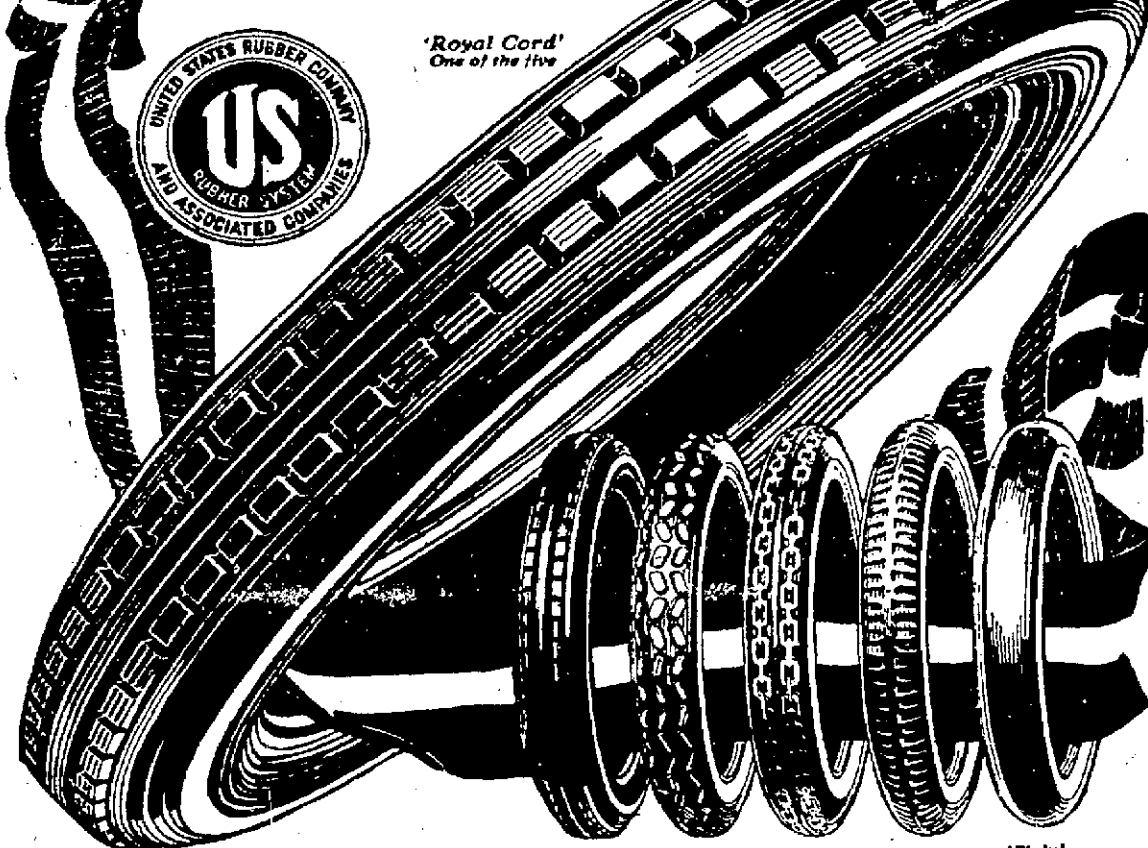

These famous good tires are built of many layers of small but exceedingly tough cords.

Each layer and each individual cord is impregnated with live, springy rubber.

The result is a lively tire. One that takes the bumps with greatest ease. One that wears many and many a mile beyond any rational expectation.

Let us put 'Royal Cords' under your car. You'll find them one of the wisest investments you ever made.

United States Tires are Good Tires

We know United States Tires are good tires. That's why we sell them.
